

Lola Johnson

This Is What You Get

Lola Johnson played here, and the sound echoes on. Her presence thick in the air, and careless enough to mix jack with the house red, Lola sings her story night after night, often accompanied only by her faithful guitar. Drawing from varied influences, such as Phoebe Snow, Jimi Hendrix, and Jeff Buckley, Lola has created an Americana Blues sound with many spins, that can be likened to many legends, but is truly her own. While outrunning convenient genre labels, Lola journeyed from singer-songwriter open mics in Boston, got Anti-folk at the Sidewalk Café, sang the blues in Baltimore, and jazz on the Bayou.

A troubadour's life is one of meaningful transience, where Lola has had her share. Darting between city and country life, she has adeptly dodged the trappings of each in the nick of time.

Going into 2016, with her third and newest release with Radian Records, 'This Is What You Get' is a full length album featuring The Now Band and many other talented musicians.

"Your EP is a fine listen on this rainy day. Cozy, exciting, intriguing. Thanks for sharing it with me." - Adam Levy, Songwriter/Guitarist (Norah Jones, Tracy Chapman, Todd Sickafoose)

"Lola Johnson brings a jazz singer's soul and vocal acrobatics into the acoustic singer-songwriter arena. Johnson's voice is so smooth and silky that every song sounds like she is reviving a standard." The Deli Magazine Issue #15 (CD Review of "That's For Sure" EP 2008)

"Lola Johnson captures a jazz singer's sensibility within the framework of contemporary folk arrangements. Her amazing voice is placed front and center in these beautiful songs. The backing band plays softly underneath. .... Johnson is a pro." Jezebel Music, Songwriters Showcase
